

Sales & Marketing Review

How to Reach em' How to Catch em'
How to Keep em'

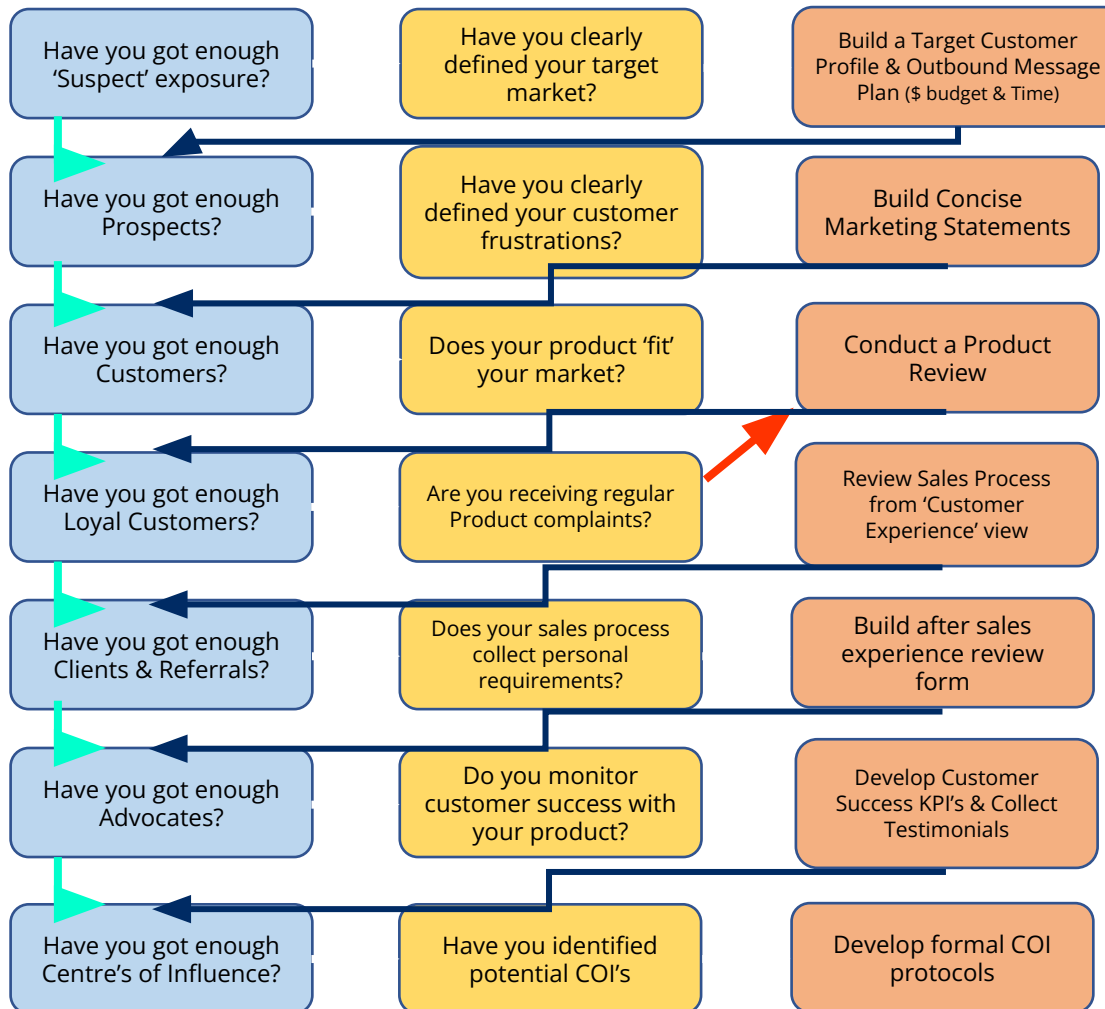

Sales & Marketing (Session Scope)

Page	Framework	Concept Summary	Helps Your Client To...	Include (Yes/No)
5	6 Marketing Questions	This concept explores 6 key questions to ensure you've considered your value from the customer's perspective.	Get clear in your own mind about who you serve, how you add value and what makes you special. (Know what matters)	Yes
7	Product Fit	This concept explores the 'trade-offs' between business profitability and customer acceptance.	Increase sales conversions from the marketing leads you generate. (Even your sub-standard salespeople should be able to win sales with your product or service.)
10	10 Marketing Messages	This concept explores 10 marketing statements that 'speak' to the purchase decision points of your customer.	Convert what you've defined (in the marketing questions) into 'sticky' outbound marketing messages. (Know how to explain it to others)
12	Customer (Persona) Type Table	This table summarises your customer types - to product fit.	Identify the 'specific messaging' for customer types vs the 'general messaging' for wider market coverage.
14	A.I.D.C.R.A Advertisement Framework	This framework explains the logical order to construct an advertisement.	Build more effective adverts and have a review framework so you can 'A' and 'B' test if desired.
17	Digital Funnel Storyboard	This concept explores the sequential offerings, messaging and responses, to entice your target customer 'from their couch to your cash register'.	Get clear on how to utilise all their marketing assets in one comprehensive plan.
22	(Outbound) Messaging Plan	This framework helps you schedule your messaging activities and explores Medium, Platform, Time & Cost as planning considerations.	Execute an effective campaign amongst all other business activities/ responsibilities.
26	(Inbound) Landing Page Review	This framework defines the reader's logic and the landing page logic, to help you define the sequence of text, graphics & widgets.	Build an effective landing page to convert more of your marketing leads into sales opportunity.
31	Sparketing (Friction) Review	This concept explores a review of your product from a 'what stops people from buying it?' vs features/ profitability.	Get clear of what your customer will happily pay for, what they could care less about & what they just don't want from you.

Sales & Marketing (Session Scope)

Page	Framework	Concept Summary	Helps Your Client To...	Include (Yes/No)
33	Branding Review	This checklist helps you align your logo, graphics, message, market promise and 'story' so that you 'stick' in your customers mind.	Build powerful mental associations that create lasting influence in the mind of your target customer.
35	Customer Loyalty Programme	This checklist helps to clarify the purpose of your customer loyalty programme and ensure it translates into profits for your business.	Stop giving stuff away if it doesn't make a measurable improvement in your business profits.
37	Pricing	This checklist encourages a review of your pricing beyond just 'lifting it up' or 'dropping it down'. Your price should be an active reflection of the value you provide your customer.	Money is an exchange of value; you need to be clear on the value you offer to price in a sustainable fashion.
39	Packaging/ Bundling	This checklist guides you through a review of how your packaging supports your 'big promise' and client perception.	Use packaging and bundled solutions to influence the purchasing decision, price point and quality perceptions of your product/ service.
41	Sales Channel Options	This checklist explores the different sales channel options and encourages a pros and cons discussion.	Identify a variety of ways to engage salespeople to sell your products or service to a wider market.
43	Sales Process Review	These templates encourage a review of the sales process from both customer and salesperson perspectives.	Know what to say and when to 'say it' to help a customer choose to do business with you.
52	Drafting Tender Proposals	Just a few notes/ ideas to incorporate in your tender applications as you see fit. (General reading rather than focused session)	Just a few notes/ ideas to incorporate in your tender applications as you see fit. (General reading rather than focused session)

Where To Start??

Suspect – Broadly fits customer profile
Prospect – Correct profile & 'Goldilocks State'
– Willing to engage with you.
Customer – Chooses to purchase from you.
Loyal Customer – Chooses to purchase from you on a regular basis.
Client – Has shared personal circumstance – sees you as being important for the completion of their 'journey'
Advocate – Actively seeks to promote you to others on a non-structured basis.
Centre of Influence – Is formally aligned with you in the promotion of your service to their customer base.

(6) Critical Marketing Questions

- Who are you targeting?

(What is the profile of your ideal customer? – How would you describe them to others?)

- What are their key concerns/common problems?

(From their perspective (not yours) why do they seek a solution to their problem?)

- What are their legitimate purchasing constraints?

(What stops them from paying for an answer to their problem?)

- What makes you special?

(How can you solve your customer's problems easier than your competition? How do you reduce risk, improve convenience, provide greater certainty of outcomes or save money for them?)

- How do you add value to your target market?

(What do you DO for them? Does your promise 'speak your customers language?')

- What are the message channels that you can use to promote your business?

(Does your target customer respond to social media, hard copy media, mainstream advertising?)

(6) Marketing Questions/Answers:

Start your session by completing the 6 Marketing Answers table.

(This is a great way to gain a contextual understanding of the problems you seek to solve for your clients and therein, the value you offer.)

Love Your Customers, Not Your Product.

To offer a product or service which is truly customer centric requires that you 'Let-Go' of your beliefs about what makes you better (or worse) than your competitors.

You must view your offer through the eyes of your customer and be sure to apply a healthy dose of SCEPTICISM & PESSIMISM (since this is what your prospects do...)

Your Product/Service features & benefits need to be examined to see if they are consistent with your target customer; which of the features do they REALLY value? What would they be prepared to get (less of) in order to get (more of). As an example, if selling bicycle componentry - would they be happy to have the product a little heavier if it was noticeably cheaper? (depends of course on your target market - Beginner or Intermediate riders may say yes - Faster or Pro riders might say no)

Your product review must be focused on what's best for your company, not your ego; there's no point being the 'best by far' if you go broke in the process. All too often a product review can become blinded by the infinite quest for perfection. Keep it simple, find out what your customers REALLY value and then give it to them...

Std Competition 'Fronts

Price

Quality / Endurance

Convenience & Location

Consistency

Availability / (Volume / Scale)

Customer Experience

Effectiveness (Accuracy)

Efficiency (Reduced Wastage)

Easier (Familiar or More Simple)

Faster, Safer, Lighter

Tastier, Quieter, Softer/Harder

Cooler / Warmer / Smoother /
Sharper / Aroma / Luxurious

Higher Status

Uniqueness / Tailored, Exclusivity

Newest / Latest

Aesthetics

Shocking or Disruptive

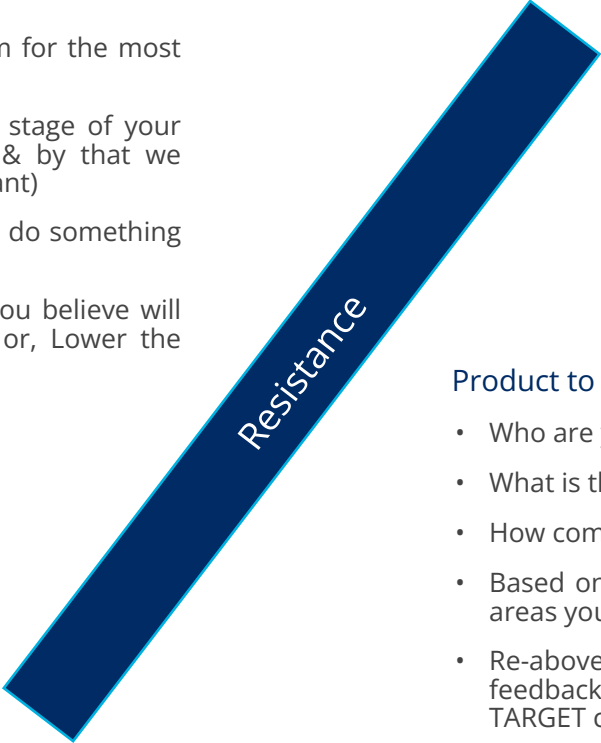

Humourous

Popularity vs. Private

Product (Fit) Review (best when also reviewed in conjunction with Porter's 5 Forces framework)

Product to Market (CUSTOMER) 'Fit'.

- Are you solving the most important problem for the most important customer?
- (If you're not easily converting at the early stage of your sales process it suggests poor market fit & by that we mean, not something customers naturally want)
- Ask yourself "Am I hoping my customers will do something that they're NOT motivated to do?"
- What are the product enhancements that you believe will DIRECTLY INFLUENCE an increase in sales or, Lower the Cost of Doing Business?

Resistance

Product to Competitor Comparison.

- Who are your main competitors?
- What is their 'flagship' product?
- How comparable is your product to theirs?
- Based on the std Competition Fronts list, what are the areas your competitors appear to be focusing on?
- Re-above, Are these the fronts that your customer feedback (research) proves to be MOST VALUED by your TARGET customer?
- How can you best respond to competition?

Product Fit Review

Complete the Product Fit table to record your thoughts regarding customer and competitor resistance.

(You don't have to follow any particular order; just capture your thoughts 'as you go')

10 Critical Marketing Messages

Who We Work With (Your target market or 'A' clients, if you prefer)

Our One Big Promise (What they can expect to enjoy IF they deal with you- summed up in one brief sentence)

What They Enjoy As A Result (3 big things)

What makes us Unique:

How We Work with Our Clients:

The Magic Happens When (What your client needs to do to allow you to do your 'best work' - 'their part in achieving excellence, if you prefer)

The Big What & The Big Why (The common problem/s or opportunity/s [you deal with] and why it has relevance to them)

Why You Do What You Do (What drives you to provide your product or service - Why you care...)

It's A Bit Like... (Your 'Metaphor Story' that helps people understand the problem/opportunity or any technical issue that causes confusion or slows the sales process)

How You Make Buying Easy (What 'Risk Removal' or Guarantee you offer; How you make payment/ selection / collection easy)

10 Critical Marketing Statements

Complete the 10 Marketing Statements table to record your critical marketing messages.

(You don't have to follow any particular order; just capture your thoughts 'as you go')

Customer (Persona) Types Matched to Product Fit - Example

	Farm Wagon	Other 1	Other 2	Other 3	Other 4
Customer Profile Name	Farmer Joe
Age, Gender, Qualifications, Relationships	39 yr, Male, Trade Qualified, Married with 3 Kids
3 Key Concerns/ Common Problems	Worker safety
3 Dominant Buying Motives	Price
3 Legitimate Purchasing Constraints	Terrain gradient
What We Do That This Customer Truly Values	Loan vehicle available if repairs take longer than 5 days
Our Key Message (to this customer)	Our price includes winter Farm King tyres
Our Message Channels	Small town rugby club sponsorship, 'subs' tent. (Shop branded ezi-up with sides)
Other

Customer (Persona) Types Matched to Product Fit

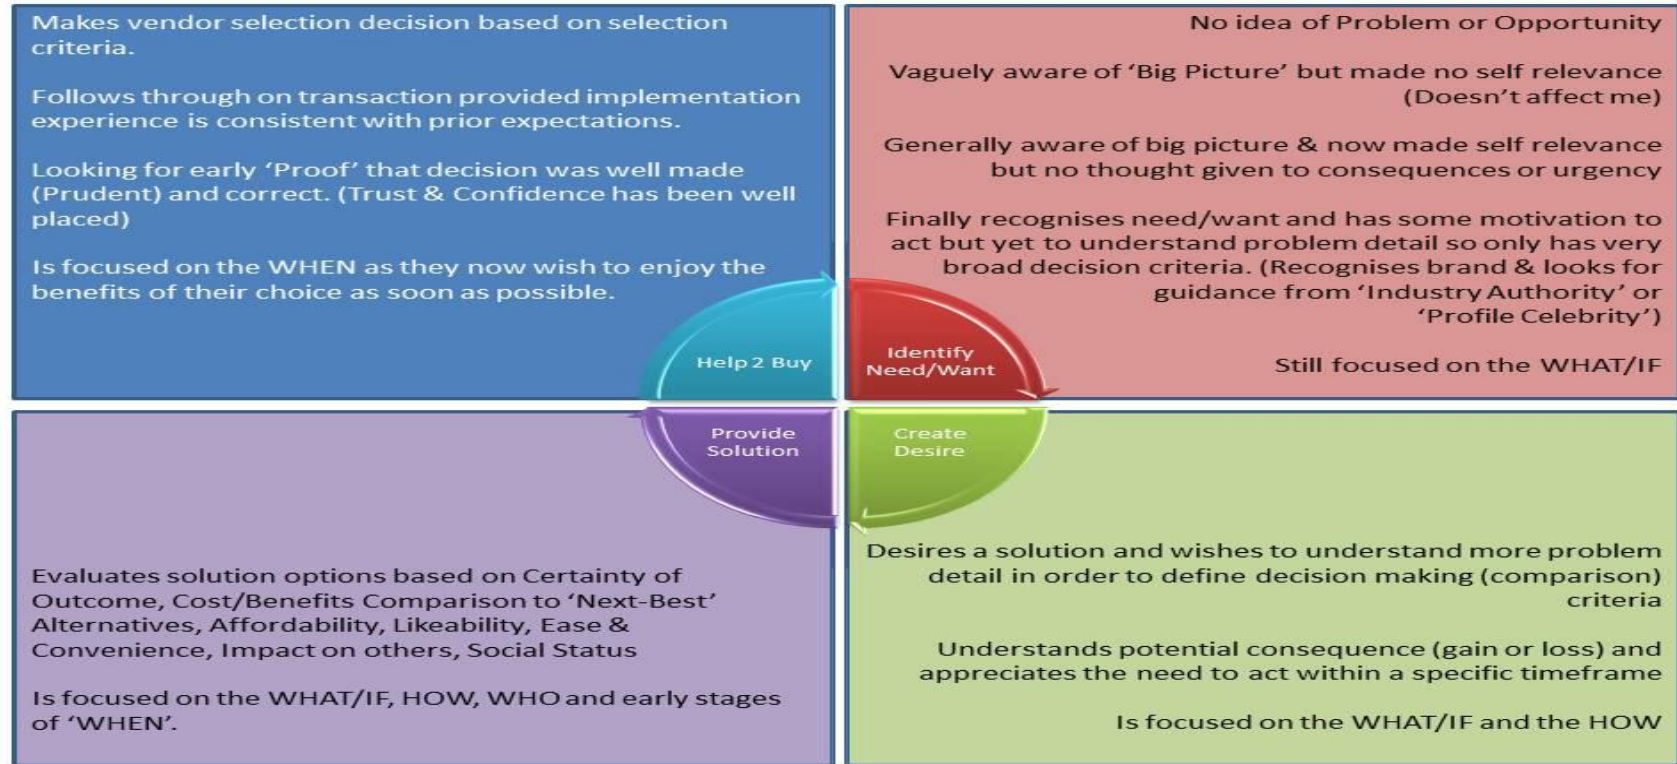

Complete the Customer Types table to develop your marketing messages and sales tension scripts.

(You don't have to follow any particular order; just capture your thoughts 'as you go')

A.I.D.C.R.A Advertising Model

Attention	Interest	Desire	Credibility	Risk Removal	Action
Grab Their Attention	Create Self Relevance	Wants / Needs Getting , Having, Keeping Experience/ Doing, Knowing, Relating, Being.	Achieve Status or Authority in their mind.	Make it Safe & Easy for them to take the first step	Tell them how to purchase. Clear & Simple
- Bright Colour - Unique Noise - Sexy Image - Bold Headline - Humourous Statement, Catch Phrase or Graphic - Energetic Presenter - Placement of Advert (which page of newspaper or position on screen, Time on TV etc) - Movement (pop-up call to action on social media as example)	- Description of 'common problem' solved by your product - Description of client circumstance - Consequences of having, not having, doing, not doing...	- Limited Offer (Scarcity) - Bargain Price - Description of 'Customer Journey' or expected Transition. (How they struggled before but it's easy and they're successful now) - Advantage over others - Peer Status (admiration and appeal) - Security & Confidence - Contribution to others - Freedom - Fear removed - Get it Now/Fast	- Demonstration of how product works to meet customer needs/ wants - Social Proof by way of - Testimonials, References, Case Studies, Statistical Data, E-book, - Statement of Reason ex- "Anyone can learn to play golf using the Binford 3000 club BECAUSE it increases the contact point, making your strike 20 percent more accurate"	- Free Trial Offer - Money Back Guarantee 'Put it Right' Guarantee - Evidence of Quality Proof Procedures 30 min 'free support' on how to use product - Free Suitability Assessment "If we can't find 5 ways to improve your golf swing there's no charge and you can walk away." - Shop open at special hours so it's Convenient or Private for you to try...	3 Steps you need to take right now (first is easy & low effort, 2nd is easy & low effort, 3rd is easy and low risk) {Ex- 1. Check your calendar to see when you'd love to be on holiday. 2. Decide if you want Hot or Cold weather. 3. Click on the 'know more' button and book a free chat with one of our travel agents about the special offers...}

Combined with Purchase Decision Process

(Our) A.I.D.C.R.A Advertisement

Attention	Interest	Desire	Credibility	Risk Removal	Action
What will grab Their Attention?	How will you Create Self Relevance?	What 'fuels their Desire'? Wants / Needs Getting , Having, Keeping Experience/ Doing, Knowing, Relating, Being.	How will you Achieve Status or Authority in their mind.	What can you do to Make it Safe & Easy for them to take the first step	Tell them how to purchase. Clear & Simple

Your Digital Funnel As A Storyboard

Take the time to imagine you're attracting a customer from their arm chair, into your shop, onto product selection and finally, the cash register. What you 'send out' - how they respond, what you do next... that type of thing.

The term 'Digital Funnel' describes all the (outbound) messaging and auto response emails - in sequence - to attract and secure a new customer. By thinking of it as a 'Storyboard' you can determine the actions and objectives of each stage in the process.

To start with, just work through your ideas about what you'd say and what you'd offer etc. (The task of automating the emails and integrating your conversion analytics between your website and social media platform/s come later.)

The following slide (Engagement Story Board -1) gives you some ideas on When to say something (McDonald's wouldn't ask you to upsize your order before you get to the counter or drive thru) and Where to 'say it'. (As an example - you wouldn't explain all your key advantages to a customer standing in your car park, you'd wait until they're in your showroom holding a product of yours in their hands.)

Story Board Part 2 gives you an example of how your on-boarding process could be displayed in a one or two page summary. (You complete your own storyboard on the subsequent slides)

Digital (New Client) On-Boarding as an 'Engagement Story-Board' -1

Message Focus	When to Talk	Where to Talk
Big What & Big Why (The common problem or opportunity and why it has relevance to them)	When you're 'grabbing their attention' and attempting to have them visit your website.	• Social media platforms • Outbound emails, blogs, • Seminars / guest appearances • Hard copy advertising • E-book giveaways
Your Big Promise (What they can expect to enjoy IF they deal with you)	Either, as they engage with your outbound material via social media or, How they get greeted when they land on your homepage on your website.	• Website home page • Back of business card • Hard copy advertising • Traditional advertising
How you solve their problems	Once they've decided to take the first step to learn more. (click on link, request brochure, arrange appointment)	On your 'second page' of your website; they need to have chosen to learn more about HOW you work with people, so keep your front page brief.
Why they should deal with you	Once they've shown they're interested in your promise, you will seek to illustrate Credibility & Empathy by explaining their problems in detail.	On your 'second page' of your website; they will be 'disturbed' by the problem before you offer a 'Global' solution. (Different ways you work with people)
What/How/Who/When/Where	When the client has sought to learn the 'detail' around your solution / 'promised offer'.	• Selected pages on your website that relate to specific solution offers. • Downloadable brochures, upon completion of contact details.

Digital (New Client) On-Boarding as an 'Engagement Story-Board' -2

Cost to Customer	Medium	How to get ATTENTION	How to capture INTEREST	What to SHARE with them	The ACTION They take	So You can GET what	Your DESIRED RESULT
Free	Facebook Instagram Linked-In	5 Reasons WHY you Should STOP Doing...	BECAUSE... You Could Suffer...	FREE Guide on WHAT to Do different (and the role you play in helping)	Click on link (Give you their TIME)	Their Name & Email Address	Build an email list of INTERESTED prospects
Tiny Fee ($37)	Facebook Instagram Linked-In	6 Things Others are DOING to Achieve...	WHAT to AIM for in your journey	WHAT success steps to take	Purchase (Give you their MONEY)	Funds to support ROI advert campaign	Build a list of prospects to COLLECT data about
Small Fee ($149)	Facebook Instagram Linked-In	HOW to SAVE TIME & MONEY Achieving xyz...	If YOU'RE at THIS STAGE in your journey	HOW to do 'XYZ' easier (entry level)	Purchase (Give you their TRUST)	More funds to support ROI advert campaign	Build a list of 'A' grade prospects to Skype Chat with
Target Client ($175 mth)	Past Purchaser Referral	Direct Email for Skype Invitation	FREE 30 min 'chat' to help them learn...	PERSONAL steps they can take... (Tell & Show Them)	Purchase (Give you their ADMIRATION)	Reasonable funds towards business revenue	Income + potential to up-sell to Premium level
Golden Client ($500- 1,000 mth)	Past Purchaser Referral	Past service	Tell Them Show Them With Them For Them	Greater COMPLEXITY Explained	Purchase (Give you their VULNERABILITY)	Profitable Income	Meaningful Work Leveraged Income
Premium Client ($2,000 mth or more)	Past Purchaser Referral	Past service	Tell Them Show Them With Them For Them	Increased HANDS - ON Involvement	Purchase (Give you their ADVOCACY)	Profitable Income	Meaningful Work Leveraged Income

(Our) Digital Client On-Boarding as an 'Engagement Story-Board' (part 1)

Cost to Customer	Medium	How to get ATTENTION	How to capture INTEREST	What to SHARE with them	The ACTION They take	So You can GET what	Your DESIRED RESULT
Free
Tiny Fee ($..)
Small Fee ($...)

(Our) Digital Client On-Boarding as an 'Engagement Story-Board' (part 2)

Cost to Customer	Medium	How to get ATTENTION	How to capture INTEREST	What to SHARE with them	The ACTION They take	So You can GET what	Your DESIRED RESULT
Target Client ($....)
Golden Client ($.....)
Premium Client ($.....)

Building Your Outbound Communication Plan

Your communication plan is simply a scheduling task to see when you plan to create and deliver your marketing message. This is an extremely simple yet most vital task; most messaging campaigns fall over because they were never scheduled in the first place!

Building your communication plan requires you to consider the MEDIUMS you use; what should you say via video to get better results, what's best to put in writing in the form of a blog, what should be delivered via an e-book or public speech? Remember also that some of your points should be repeated (Theme/Concept and Key Principles) but the (Detail) should vary from time to time across mediums, in order to maintain interest and 'build desire' for your customer to act.

Building your communication also plan requires you to consider the PLATFORMS you use; what should you say via Facebook vs LinkedIn. Should you be using Instagram or Tik-Tok? Choosing your platform will often come down to knowing the age and user preferences of your target customer but it will also be limited by what you're experienced with, so be prepared to learn new platforms if required.

The final components of your plan come down to TIME and MONEY. Think about the timing of your marketing efforts against all the other activities that need to be completed within your business. Consider also, the timing and 'building up' of your story to drive engagement during a time that your customers are more likely to transact. It's great to try and advertise to 'fill a seasonal hole' but be careful to notice the drivers behind the seasonal hole, else you can end up 'laying bait when the fish have gone'...

Outbound Communication Plan (as it relates to your concept domains)

Concept Domain (examples)	Video	Article/Content Post	Speech	Blog (Opinion – Comment)
Cashflow	Working Capital Cycle	5 Tips To Managing Your Cash Flow	Why Most New Business Ventures Fail	Why Our Education System is Failing Entrepreneurs
Getting Noticed	The Customers Journey from Footpath to Counter	Be Yourself To Get Noticed	Speaking To Your Market vs. Shouting At The World	When Everybody's Talking, Who's Listening?
Getting More From the Team You've Got	The 3 Keys to Employee Happiness	Leadership is About Gaining Follow-ship	What Does Great Teamwork Look Like?	If We Value Each Other, Why Don't We Show It?
Building Systems (not a prison)	Remove the Blockage, Don't increase the Pressure	What We Can Learn From McDonalds	Why The 80/20 Rule Is 80 Percent Of What You Need	The E-Myth Has Got A Lot To Answer For...
Aiming for the Summit	Knowing What You Want	What Stops Us From Aiming High?	Critical Lessons From The Marshmallow Test	Got A Dream? Keep It To Yourself.
Clocking In & Clocking Out	Powerful Self Talk	How Habits Are Built	What You Do Is More Important Than Your Time To Do It	Is It Only Sports People That Choke?

Outbound Communication Plan (as it relates to your concept domains)

Concept Domain (examples)	Video	Article/Content Post	Speech	Blog (Opinion – Comment)
Cashflow	June	July	August	October
Getting Noticed		September		October
Getting More From the Team You've Got	August	September	November	January
Building Systems (not a prison)		December	February
Aiming for the Summit	February	March	April	May
Clocking In & Clocking Out				March

Outbound Communication Plan (as it relates to your concept domains)

Concept Domain (examples)	Video	Article/Content Post	Speech	Blog (Opinion – Comment)

Designing Your Landing Page

OK, you've done all the hard work of defining your customer, clarifying their needs, reducing sales friction points (by improving your product or service) and building powerful, well placed, outbound messages. Congratulations, it worked! You now have potential customers (prospects) 'clicking the links' or visiting your landing page; all you have to do now is figure out what you want them to see...

The following 4 slides help you define the purpose of each section on your landing page. (Each section could be defined as a colour 'band' or could simply be defined by a Title, Graphic or 'Widget' - such as a sign up form.)

Before you start laying up text and graphics, determine the objective (of each section) in relation to the psychology of the sale and put it in 'plain english' terms of what you believe your target customer is thinking, and the 'logic' of what you were hoping to achieve. From there, you can then add the words and images etc.

The advantage of doing it this way is that in future, you can review the logic of 'what did we think our target customer wanted to see/read?' vs 'what we said in response?' You can test this by simply talking with friends, family, existing customers etc because you can ask in 'plain english' terms... "If you went to a site like this, what would you want to know in the first 10 secs of reading, - if you liked what you saw, what would it take for you to agree to click subscribe/ sign up for a demo/ agree to purchase?" and so on...

Designing Your Landing Page -1

Arrival Assumption: Reader arrived as a result of clicking a link from an outbound article/ advert placed in Facebook or LinkedIn.
First 7 secs - Have I arrived on the right page? (Is Logo and Colour consistent with advert etc) and does the page look professional/ appealing?

Section 1	Readers Logic	Landing Page Logic	Marketing Statement
Title	What can you do for me?	Grab attention with 1 big promise and attractive graphics that depict customer success.	Lose Weight As You Eat Doughnuts!
Subtitle	What did you just promise? Did I read that right??	Support the promise with a 'tiny' bit of expansion	You've never had so much fun losing weight before...
Text Body	Sounds good but what exactly will this do for me?	'Spell Out' the promise so it creates 'theatre in their mind'	Build muscle, burn fat and sleep longer with our revolutionary protein doughnuts.
Widget	I've seen enough, what do I do now?	Call to Action (CTA) button - take them to 1st stage in our sales process	Call to Action (CTA) button - linking to 'free taste test' - give their name, cell ph number & address.

Section 2	Readers Logic	Landing Page Logic	Marketing Statement
Text Body	I'm Not Convinced Yet - Tell me how you accomplish your promise	Summarise how we accomplish our promise	We combine the finest whey isolate protein powder with organic buttermilk and Mongolian coconut husk to deliver a mouth watering doughnut that looks like a doughnut; feels like a doughnut in your mouth, but works to stimulate your Hippocampus and adrenal gonads to build muscle while you sleep!
Text & Graphics	How can I believe you	Show them 3 things to support what we just said.	Picture 1 - Organic Ingredients - text to explain Picture 2 - Yummy Doughnut - text to explain Picture 3 - Muscle bound guy, Attractive girl. - text to explain how results may vary.

Designing Your Landing Page -2

Section 3	Readers Logic	Landing Page Logic	Marketing Statement
Title	Prove it!	Let us show it to you.	See For Yourself!
Video	Okay this sounds good, but what would all of this look like in action?	Allow the reader to have a visual example of what we do to deliver on our promise.	Show our facilities Show the lab technicians doing yoga Show us carrying the ingredients through the Mongolian mountains Show us blending the mixture late into the night Show customers eating our doughnut and bursting with energy Show our customers getting promoted after eating our doughnuts (What we want them to Know, Feel, Do about our product)

Section 4	Readers Logic	Landing Page Logic	Marketing Statement
Title	Alright, I'm getting convinced, but how would I get started?	Here's what we want you to do...	3 Steps to Your Weight Loss Success!
Subtitle	What do I need to do, in sequence	Sequence suggests movement, we want you to act now	Step 1. Weigh yourself - picture 1 Step 2. Decide how much weight you want to lose - picture 2 Step 3. Sign up for our free taste test
Widget	I've seen enough, what do I do now?	Call to Action (CTA) button - take them to 1st stage in our sales process	Call to Action (CTA) button - linking to 'free taste test' - give their name, cell ph number & address.

Designing Your Landing Page -3

Section 5	Readers Logic	Landing Page Logic	Marketing Statement
Title	I'm still not convinced, Who are these guys? Do they have any credibility?	Give background info on the team and provide assurance that we know what we're talking about.	Meet The 'Dream Team'
Subtitle	Will these guys be around in future?	Tell them what makes us so committed - why we won't give up on our promise to help them.	Our mission is to change the way people see food and sleep, forever!
Text Body	What makes them 'so special'?	Tell them what makes us special	Bill discovered the secret formula when trekking through the Mongolian mountains, it was shared with him by the village chief after he fell, trying to save a kitten in a tree...
Graphics Table	Show the team member photo, state their role, blurb and contact details - in a table format.

Section 6	Readers Logic	Landing Page Logic	Marketing Statement
Title	How good is it? - Who else has it worked for?	Provide Social Proof	Don't just take our word for it, here's what others have to say...
Testimonial Graphics	Let me see them, learn their story.	Show them our success stories are people just like them.	Name - Photo Their Problem/ backstory Their Journey Their result What they now enjoy
Subtitle	Will it work for me too?	Explain the results are regular and WHY it works.	Anyone can enjoy rapid weight loss using our doughnuts because we help you match your body type to our product options with our exclusive 21 point optical assessment checklist.

Designing Your Landing Page -4

Section 7	Readers Logic	Landing Page Logic	Marketing Statement
Widget	I've seen enough, what do I do now?	Call to Action (CTA) button - take them to 1st stage in our sales process	Call to Action (CTA) button - linking to 'free taste test' - give their name, cell ph number & address.

Section 8	Readers Logic	Landing Page Logic	Marketing Statement
Footer	How do I get hold of you if I need to?	How you can get hold of us if you have any other questions / provide social media backlinks	Company Entity Name, Phone Number, address, email, social media icons

Sparketing

Sales Process

Product Design

Market Message / Branding

5 Drivers of Habits

Reason:	(Global perspective)
Trigger:	(Localised / 'Self Relevant' perspective)
Micro Habit:	(Small change consistent with success but not seen as too risky or painful)
Effective Practice:	(Repetition of micro-habit when associated to trigger environment)
Plan:	(Global perspective of on-going management 'in the real world')

By considering the SALES PROCESS you acknowledge the decision points that a salesperson is required to facilitate on behalf of the customer; you can then review how best to deliver this (Face to Face or via Skype etc)

This provides INSIGHT into the greatest DECISION FRICTIONS facing your customer (since if there was no friction, they would simply purchase online with ease) Try to identify the TRIGGERS that lead customers to overcome their purchasing fears / friction.

Review the MAIN FRICTIONS to determine if your product or service can be modified (in any way) to REDUCE or ELIMINATE these issues. Explore the 'general market understanding' of your product or service; is it LACK OF *EDUCATION that's causing the key frictions? (*education as it relates to the need / benefits of your product)

Finally, assess your current marketing statements to see if they INCREASE or REDUCE the purchasing frustrations of your target customer. Do they explain what your product / service ACHIEVES FOR THEM?

Are your statements CONCISE and void of JARGON?

(Our) Sparketing Thoughts - (Sales Friction Review)

Sparketing Considerations	Your Sparketing Notes
List the logical decisions that your salesperson must help your customer 'work through' in order to secure the sale.
Should this be done face to face or will Zoom allow you to achieve the same?
What (as a result of above considerations) can you identify as being the 'Major Friction Points'?
What are the 'Triggers' that would cause your customer to ignore the 'friction' and complete a purchase?
What can you do (in terms of product/ service development) to reduce the Major Frictions?
Does lack of education (of benefits) cause the friction or is it 'bigger than that'?
List your marketing statements that seek to overcome the 'Major Frictions'.	1 2 3 4 5

Branding (quick takeaways)

“Your brand is what people say about you (your company/product) when you’re not in the room.” Jeff Bezos.

- Imagery & Messaging MUST BE CONGRUENT; that is to say, they must align your product or service to the POSITION you want to hold in your TARGET customer's MIND. (If you wish to project quality and exclusivity your packaging and price must reflect this...) Remember, branding is about creating positive associations for your customer therefore, you must know what they want and be realistic about the association you can create. Approach the task from the customers view and ask “If I had these ingredients, what would I make of them?”
- Your MESSAGING must be consistent (in theme) but NOT NECESSARILY Identical. (What you put in writing may be bolder than what you might say in person for example)
- IMAGERY must always be consistent (since its purpose is to create mental associations)
- Remember, your PROSPECTS care more about what your CURRENT CUSTOMERS say about you (and your product) than YOU DO. Therefore, your marketing statements must be supported by customer opinion; if you’re messaging about how you add value but your customers see you adding value another way, you’re wasting your marketing dollar.
- The HOLY GRAIL of branding (in my opinion) is when you have an IMAGE, A STORY and A PROMISE that EASILY EXPLAINS what makes you different and (importantly) HOW THAT BENEFITS YOUR CUSTOMER. (all in one)

(Our) Branding Thoughts

Branding Considerations	Your Branding Ideas
Can you define what your product or service DOES for your customer OR, defines YOU and WHAT YOU DO FOR OTHERS in one word?	(examples) Confidence: Beauty: Elegance: Energised: Safe: Calm: Coach:
What does your business name suggest to your target market?
What colours have you chosen and why? (Have you checked the 'colour associations' to people's emotions?)
What image or logo do you use to make recognition easy? (Is it transferable to print and fabric; does it 'scale up and down' for signage and letterhead?)
Can you generate a Value Proposition statement (What it DOES for them or MAKES THEM FEEL) in less than 4 words (preferably 3 or less) to support your imagery?	Gives you Wings: Just do It: Lovin' It: Simplifying Advisory:
Is there a sound or 'jingle' that supports your imagery?
How does your pricing and packaging tactics support your brand position to your customer and again, differentiate you from your competition?
What financial and time budget do you have to carry the message to your market. (Even the most 'sticky' phrase and logo requires both Time & Repetition to make a difference to your business)

Customer Loyalty Programme (Quick Takeaways)

- The emphasis of a loyalty programme is to REDUCE the COST of GAINING a CUSTOMER and/or to EXTEND the FREQUENCY and AVERAGE SPEND of your EXISTING customers. If you don't have any points of measure to see who is purchasing more often you'll never know for sure if its working. (as an example – a customer loyalty card at a cafe but no customer name on it or date when issued – you can track how many free cups of coffee you give away but have no idea if its contributing to 'LOYALTY' expressed as more purchases in a certain time. It's not a loyalty card; it's a free coffee card)
- LOYALTY may also be expressed in terms of referrals provided (especially in big-ticket items where the need is not required on a frequent basis) This is where your 'Friend Get Friend deal comes into play...
- Try to GAIN SPENDING LEVERAGE in your programme (such as arranging a deal with a local restaurant where they want more customers; you pay $100 for a dinner voucher but they provide a 'Face Value' voucher for $140 making it much more attractive)
- Remember to include UCD's (Unexpected Customer Delights) as part of your programme to increase referrals; as an example – you mail out a voucher for something 6 weeks after they've bought 'out of the blue' to increase their 'Excitement Period'. As they say, being REMARKABLE is being ABLE to be REMARKED about...
- Make sure your loyalty programme is in support of your product fit; rather than INSTEAD of it. (as an example – SKY TV in NZ offered a 'partner discount programme' to offset the massive customer defections but it's worthless to a customer if the CORE PRODUCT is at fault. – Netflix & Live Stream offers MUCH MORE choice as well as being cheaper)
- If you're developing a Loyalty Programme but have yet to establish a regular feedback loop to learn of customer issues (and positive feedback) then you've skipped a step. ONLY after you've researched what it is about your current service/product offer that your customers enjoy, can you hope to deliver something to ENHANCE that experience.

Customer Loyalty Programme

(Quick Takeaways) VALUABLE

Customer Loyalty Considerations	Your Loyalty Ideas
What current data do you have in terms of customer average spend, purchase frequency and product/service utilisation? (do they use a range of your products or just their favourite 1 or 2)
What is the calculated cost of securing a new customer for your business? (and if time is a factor - how long does it take to secure a new customer?)
What is the focus of your loyalty programme? Is it to REDUCE the COST of GAINING a CUSTOMER or, to EXTEND the FREQUENCY and AVERAGE SPEND of your EXISTING customers. (Explain Why?)
What are your average weekly/ monthly referrals and how are they tracked at present?
To be considered 'Remarkable' you must do something that your customer is 'Able to make a Remark about'. What do you do that is worthy of being used in conversation by your customer?
What can you offer your customer (in return for Loyalty as you define it) that is VALUABLE AND UNIQUE? (To THEM)
Does your Loyalty Programme provide 'Status Levels' and if so, is the status revered by your customer?
What metrics do you use (Key Performance Indicators) to measure the effectiveness of your loyalty programme IN INCREASING BUSINESS PROFITS?

Pricing Options (Pro's & Con's)

	Cost Plus Pricing	Competitor Based Pricing	Value Based Pricing
Con's	Absolutely no regard for how the customer values your product or service, little or no regard to your competitors which leaves the 'blind-spot' of never knowing what the customer can get for their money elsewhere.	Assumes you're comparing 'like for like' in terms of delivery/experience and places you in a 'battle of attrition' with your competitors. What happens if your 'pockets aren't as deep as theirs'?	Requires greater engagement in the SCOPING aspect of your sales process. Requires greater market awareness of competitors and knowing your own points of differentiation. Must be willing to negotiate 'hard' and let some prospects walk away.
Pro's	Simple system and easy to ensure that goods or services are sold for a profit (margin). Easy and predictable process which allows for easy 'back-costing' to ensure all infrastructure costs are covered also.	Gives you some understanding of what your customer can get for their money and therefore, some understanding of what they may be prepared to pay you. Ensures your 'sales volume' should mirror the marketplace in general and allows you to focus on competing in other aspects (quality/service etc.)	Ensures you maximise the profit-per-engagement with each client. It 'flushes out' the expectations and measurement aspects of your client which makes it easier to meet their expectations and create better word of mouth referral business in future.

Pricing Options

Pricing Considerations	Your Pricing Ideas
Which of the three pricing philosophies do you abide by most?
What 'cost calculations' have you conducted to establish your pricing strategies? (What data have you collected to support these calculations?)
What 'competitor calculations' have you conducted to establish your pricing strategies? (What data have you collected to support these calculations?)
What 'customer value calculations' have you conducted to establish your pricing strategies? (What data have you collected to support these calculations?)
What attempts have you made to COMBINE the three pricing philosophies into your product/ services prices?
What do you monitor to support your 'Price Elasticity' range? (What sets the 'upper and lower range' of your prices?)

Packaging & Bundling (Quick Takeaways)

Your product Packaging is one of the easiest ways to confirm your branding position with your target customer; BOTH your Pricing and your Differentiation is reflected at time of purchase decision.

Take these biscuits as an example; chocolate afghans (my favourite) were given to my wife as a gift by a close friend. Now ask yourself, how would you feel about giving a plastic bag of biscuits to a friend as a gift? (compared to this fancy tin) What was the price? (5x the price of a bag of local biscuits) Oh and by the way, my normal biscuits were much tastier and larger 😊

Another example of Brand Based Packaging is how Volkswagen extends the cost of research and development (including manufacturing line presses and jigs) by selling componentry for a premium price in an Audi or Bentley yet years later, uses the same components in their lower priced Skoda or Seat range. (After all, the vehicles body panels (shape) IS the PACKAGING!)

Consider product BUNDLING; it's a great way to Cross-Sell your product range and INTRODUCE your customer to an ancillary product that they may have yet to try for themselves.

Two great examples of product Bundling is 1. The Combo Meal – no explanation needed and 2. A Men's Fragrance Pack – Use the CORE PRODUCT (under arm deodorant as an example) but then include a shower gel and aftershave balm in small size options.

Bundling achieves financial savings for your business as both the cost of acquiring the customer and the freight logistics are reduced. In time, your purchasing costs of materials may be reduced due to the increase in your sales volume which in turn, may make the cost of releasing a new product cheaper and less risky.

Packaging & Bundling

Packaging & Bundling Considerations	Your Packaging & Bundling Ideas
What have you gained (by way of customer feedback) about the packaging or presentation of your product/ service?
What does your current packaging or presentation attempt to 'say' about your product/ service/ business? (Is it consistent with your branding/ positioning?)
What has influenced your packaging choices? (Weight/Shipping Cost - Recycling/Environment Affect - Utility of 'container' uses (either for product or by customer post delivery) - Shelf Presentation as examples)
Do you use multiple distribution options? If so, would it make sense to have different packaging options to match the 'point of sale' requirements?
What are the 'bundling options' (for your product/service) on offer to your customers?
Do you bundle obscure or 'fringe sellers' to increase the cross-sell chances; or do you bundle 'top sellers' to reduce cost of sale. (Why?)
What is the metric you use (Key Performance Indicator) to assess the effectiveness of your bundling tactics?

Sales Distribution (Channel) Options

	Commission Only (tied) Sales Team	Salaried (tied) Sales Team	Licensed Distributor (Independents)	Formal Alliance Licensed Distributor
Pro's	- You have (some) control over the sales techniques coached and applied. - Your fixed costs are reduced so it's possible to run a larger sales team, giving you greater (potentially) market-share and your cash flow is easier to manage.	- Easier to recruit, much greater influence over minimum activity levels and attendance of training sessions. - Easier to make sales team better focused on customer experience. - Sales team members stay with your company longer	- Gain exposure to more proficient sales people (hopefully) as they are in their own business by choice. - Not bearing any (direct) cost of recruitment or training prior to chance to assess them. - Provides quicker options to scale globally.	- You can have greater influence over sales tactics, branding and the after sales support provided to customer. - Possible exposure to the distributor's established client base. - Able to conduct 'due diligence' on their current abilities and market perception.
Con's	- You have a reduced 'recruitment pool' and potential for greater team member 'churn'. - Possible to inherit a cut-throat sales culture, potentially damaging your reputation. - Reduced influence over tactics used & activity levels.	- Fixed costs increase, cash flow is harder to manage and you're more exposed to seasonal volatility or economic downturn. - Due to fixed costs, you're forced to run a smaller team leaving you (potentially) unable to meet customer demand in busy times.	- Harder to track sales activity inputs and therein forecast future revenue. - Little or no ability to forge direct customer relations so you risk losing future up-sells. - You're forced to fight for their 'sales share' as they may be selling your competitors product also.	- Exposure to stock loss as they sell units without making payment. (this also applies to the independent's) - Harder to exit the relationship if it's not working for you. - Possible culture clash or administration confusion. - More time consuming to arrange and execute.

Sales Distribution (Channel) Options

Sales Distribution Considerations	Your Sales Distribution Ideas
Do you apply a single sales distribution philosophy or do you apply a variety of tactics depending on products/services or geographical locations? (Why?)
What have you done to mitigate the negative (the cons as listed) consequences of your chosen distribution channel.?
What would you list as being the SINGLE BIGGEST problem with your dominant distribution channel.?
What are you measuring (in regards to this issue) to determine if your tactics are proving effective at improving the issue above?
If you were to experiment with a different distribution model, which of the options listed would you go with and why?
Has your sales process been flowcharted to reflect logical decision stages and predictable tension points?
Have scripts been developed, rehearsed, measured and improved to deal with the predictable tension points of your sales process?

Identifying the Sales Arena

What's the difference between 'point of sale', 'consultancy style' and 'territory' selling?

Point of sale is more product, features/benefits oriented with a greater emphasis being placed on the close as the motive for purchase is assumed to be clear to the customer prior to them approaching you. It is considered more traditional [retail] type selling. In many cases, business between the two parties may never be repeated. Tendering tends to fit into this category as the need/want is defined so the focus shifts to clarifying the expectations, highlighting (and solving) complexity that the client may have been unaware of and ultimately, flushing out HOW THEY VALUE certain aspects of the job.

Consultancy selling usually occurs over a greater length of time with more emphasis being placed on the 'investigative' aspects of the clients needs, as well as the business relationship itself. Doing business is often the beginning of the new relationship, rather than the end.

Territory Management selling {'Repping' to existing clients} is a combination of the two above but emphasis must be placed on establishing 'strategic relations'. That is to say, the client should welcome the salesperson as someone who can add value to their business on a wider scope than that which relates purely to the product being sold.

(An example of this would be a rep that deals with 'top end' stereo equipment, retailed by boutique stores. If the sales rep could offer intelligent suggestions to the store owner regarding the marketing and branding of the store, he/she would differentiate from the competition and enjoy more open business dealings)

The (Honey & Mumford) 4 Processing Styles

1. Activist

Impulsive, Quick to decide: “I like it, I want it now”. They interested in sequence of ACTION - explain the ‘steps to purchase’.

2. Pragmatist

Emotive but want reassurance; they seek PROOF - provide data, testimonials, statistics, case study examples etc.

3. Reflector

They need TIME; making decisions disturb them emotionally so they need to withdraw and work through the process.

4. Theorist

They need to CONTRIBUTE; allow them to voice their thoughts and ideas on the solution and the purchase/ delivery/ installation process. Explain the areas that are ‘not open to variance’ but invite them to ‘help get the best outcome for everyone’.

The ‘trick’ is not to attempt to guess the person’s dominant processing style but rather, to DESIGN a sales process that considers the processing / decision needs of the customer and make the process ALLOW for each style - every time.

This makes life far easier for both the salesperson AND the customer as predictable tensions can be avoided, and ‘buyers remorse’ significantly reduced, simply by letting people decide in a manner that suits them.

Logical (Point of Sale) Decision Points

Positioning: Is the customer willing to engage with me, is the decision maker present?

Needs/Wants: Does the prospect have a legitimate need/want for my product or service, Will it be a profitable & enjoyable engagement for me?

Qualification: Does the prospect have the Financial & Non-Financial Means to be able to complete a transaction with me? (Time, Money, Health, Age, etc.)

Presentation: Does my product or service offer satisfy their expectations, needs & wants, Is it a win-win, Is there anything I've missed that could prevent us doing business?

Elimination: What can I 'take off the table' to narrow the focus of decision, will the prospect allow me to engage in their 'decision space'?

Win / Win: Is the answer yes/no or a reduction or layered delivery over time, If so why/why not and How long, Is their request acceptable to me/business?

Logical (Consultancy) Decision Points

Research: Do they fit my profile, Are they approachable?

Phone Call: Will they agree to meet, Are they open minded?

Introduction: Is there a need for further discussion, What are the chances of doing business now or in the future, Who else needs to make the decision?

Scope: Does the prospect have a legitimate need/want for my product or service, what are the complexities/drivers of the engagement and will it be a profitable & enjoyable engagement for me?

Presentation: Does my product or service offer satisfy their expectations, needs & wants, Is it a win-win, Is there anything I've missed that could prevent us doing business?

Implementation: Is the answer yes/no or a reduction or layered delivery over time, If so why/why not and How long, Is their request acceptable to me?

Flowcharting Your Sales Process

Complete the Sales Flowchart table to record the 'customer experience' of your sales process.

(start from the very first customer response then ask 'what happens next'? - be as detailed as possible - remember to check that your sales process is 'aligned to you arena' - there's no point building a long discovery sequence for retail application.)

Scripting For Known Tension Points

Think of your sales process as a Rugby game; you know in advance that at some point in the match there'll be a penalty. At another point, a scrum will be required. At another, a line out and so on...

Players don't know EXACTLY when they will happen but they know to prepare in advance since the chances of these events occurring is extremely high.

And so it is with your sales process; you KNOW there will be certain parts where the customer asks 'those awkward questions' or raises the predictable objections.

Things like... "I have to think it over" or "I'm just looking..."

Take some time to brainstorm the important parts of your sales process (NOT the entire process - word for word) so you're better prepared.

Another way to approach this task is to think... "What are the things I find myself thinking... I wished I'd said..." afterwards.
(think of them now and be ready for next time)

Holes Not Drill Bits...

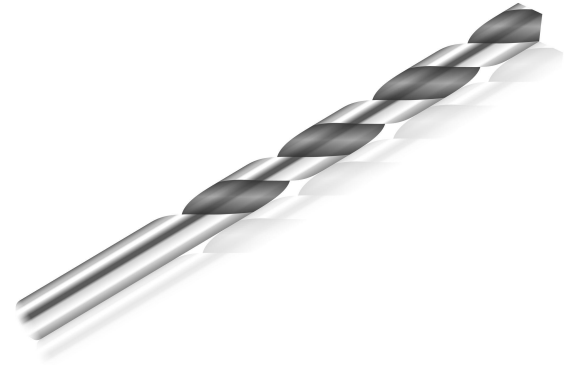

Many people are familiar with the adage “Sell the sizzle, not the steak” or something similar. We are of course, referring to the idea of relating features and benefits to the wants and needs of our customers.

The key point to remember is that the Feature is an aspect or component of your product or service and the Benefit is WHAT that same feature DOES FOR your customer.

Example...

“Mr customer, this tungsten tipped drill bit is made of the strongest material available to tradespeople like yourself. (NASA have something stronger but they don’t like to share) The advantage is that the drill will stay sharp and cut clean holes nearly 3 times as long as a standard drill bit.”

“But the REAL BENEFIT is that you get clean holes exactly where you want with less effort, and no time wasted..”

Tension Point Scripts

Complete the Tension Point Scripts table to record how you can be best prepared for your sales dealings.

(make sure you rehearse the scripts to see if they pass the 'average Joe' test; keep them as short as possible & use metaphor based stories where appropriate)

Notes

Type your notes here

Bonus Material

(Drafting Tender Proposals)

Tender Documents (Points to Consider)

The objectives of a tender document should be to state the position and understanding that you have of the brief provided, in a clear and logical manner that allows the decision maker to consider your offer in full knowledge of the advantages you feel you provide.

The following points for consideration are only in regard to layout and presentation. At best, your presentation should be able to make it easy for the reader to absorb your key points of difference in a manner that increases their chance of memory retention.

At worst, a poor layout can cause frustration and tension for someone who is most likely to be considering a number of proposals with the deadline looming. In this environment, a poor layout could cause misunderstanding that could lead to your proposal being marginalised unfairly.

To begin, visualise the process that you feel the person reviewing the tenders (or a board of directors etc.) is likely to adopt. This is usually highlighted in the brief by way of tender layout requests such as the requirement to provide a resource schedule, proof of experience, team profile and methodology as well as costings etc.

Some organisations utilise a points system, you need to be aware, if this is the case, of the bias they apply to certain areas as this will provide a key as to the amount of detail required.

Tender Documents (Points to Consider)

Below are a few bullet points for your consideration...

- Provide a contents page together with separator cards that can help those involved quickly find each section. It is inevitable on large documents that points will be re-visited so make it easy to find information. This is the most basic of principles but often overlooked.
- If you have been asked to keep 'packaging' to a minimum, simply enclose a letter that explains your reason for providing the layout (ex, For your convenience you will find we have provided separator cards to make locating information easier, we trust this meets with your approval...)
- You may choose to include what they have requested as 'option B'
- Don't confuse instructions on layout as being sacrosanct, in most cases what the person really wants is to keep waffle to a minimum, make information easy to find in a layout that follows the order of previous material so that 'Apples for Apples' comparisons can be applied. If you deviate from what is asked, explain your reasons.
- It's o-k to add information so long as it can easily be detached and discarded, ie- it does not form the key body of text. Make this visible, explain why you have added it and suggest they throw it away if it is of no use to them. Never provide less than what is asked.
- State what you believe to be as 'Critical Factors' for the projects success, these should number no more than 5, ideally 3.

Tender Documents (Points to Consider)

- Take the time to define the objective of each tender proposal (from your perspective) in writing before you begin. This will help you to stay on track and keep information relevant.
- When people are under pressure and have much to complete, they rarely apply brownie points for vocabulary. Reduce jargon, keep sentences short and constructive towards the overall objective.
- To make reading easier, use colour, graphs and charts, sketches or maybe even a relevant cartoon!
- Your introduction should state your appreciation for being asked to tender and should also summarise the rationale behind your proposal. Explain that you have taken a confident stance, explain that for ease of presentation you will construct all text in the positive (ex, upon appointment we will start within 7 days etc.) but request they not be offended, that you understand that due process is to be applied.
- Communication is the biggest cause of tender 'blowouts'. Take the time to specifically show how you intend to manage the flow of information, that you have identified where the bottlenecks and communication points are (the point at which one person has to hand over instructions to another or perhaps between divisions etc.) and what you propose to use by way of agendas and reports to manage meetings effectively. Explain also, how you intend to minute or record findings.

Tender Documents (Points to Consider)

- Except in the case where a specific number of pages of text has been requested, submit the information with sufficient room for notes to be made next to blocks of text by the person/s reviewing the tender. If you can illustrate effort and intent to reduce stress in their lives, they are less likely to disregard information that may be initially confusing to them. (explain this in your introduction also)
- When presenting your price, don't beat about the bush, state the full and complete price boldly right up front. Show a degree of pride in your offer and suggest they will find it value for money when considering all other features and benefits of your service. Then proceed to show the workings and price break down in a logical and sequential order.
- Never place too much emphasis on a single tender, business is a numbers game and the only way you can expect to generate sustainable growth is by casting your net further and tendering for a larger number of opportunities. Let the law of averages work for you.
- In the event you find yourself tendering on a repetitive basis with an organisation, take the time to meet with them (maybe over a coffee and muffin) and learn where you can improve and how your layout is perceived. Don't confuse this with attempting to get an inside running or backhanders, you simply want to know if the way that you present your case is being perceived as you would like and if not, why not.
- Above all, know what it costs you to be in business before you prepare your tender. This may sound basic but all too often people get carried away in their pricing because they have forgotten to add the real costs of being in business. Replacement of equipment, training of people, interest costs when experiencing rapid growth etc. Remember to separate job profitability from cash position, the next big tender may be the one that kills ya!

Notes

Type your notes here